We have a "two adult rule". What does this refer to?

Is there any time that it would be appropriate to use physical correction on a child or youth under the care of our programs?

What is appropriate when it comes to showing affirmation or affection to a youth in our programs?

What is physical abuse?

What are some of the indicators of sexual abuse?

What is our duty to report?

If a report is made, who needs to be contacted?

or,

and,

Is it important to write down all that has been disclosed to you?

What sort of information should you include in a suspected abuse report?

Are there any allegations that we can ignore?

If you are unsure if a report to authorities is required, please make notes and discretely ask your program lead for help.

I have read through the United Youth Outreach Policy Regarding Child Protection/ Abuse and Screening of Youth Workers. I have a basic understanding of the policies and procedures related to protecting children and understand my duty to report in the case of disclosures of abuse. I also understand that as a leader, I will work with another adult and avoid being alone with a minor (out of sight of others). I will be careful with my behaviours and words to avoid actions that are abusive or could be interpreted as such.
